Lawrence Walsh Tells Police He Was Knocked Down Early Saturday Night and Relieved of Roll of Greenbacks

WAS DRUNK FOR SEVERAL DAYS

Displayed Roll of Bills in Billiard Hall and Rob- bery Follows—Unable to Give Clues to His Assailants

Appleton police Monday were trying to find the person or persons who overpowered Lawrence Walsh of Milwaukee on Superior st., not far from the telephone exchange late Saturday night and robbed him of $1,400 in cash.

A number of suspects were picked up immediately after the robbery was reported to the police Saturday night and others were taken to the police station Sunday. Some of them were being held pending investigation.

Walsh left Milwaukee Friday morning and went to Menasha where he was stopping. On Saturday night he came over to Appleton to see the city and spend the evening. Between 9 and 10 o'clock he made some purchases at the Jenson Arcade and when paying for them displayed a large roll of greenbacks.

A moment later he stepped out into the street. Sometime afterward he returned to the billiard hall and told A. P. Jenson he had been robbed of all the money he had. Mr. Jenson reported the robbery to the police.

Caught His Arm
Walsh told the police that when he stepped out of the Arcade a man caught him by the arm and said, "Let's go over this way." They walked north on Appleton st. and turned west on Washington. After they had reached a dark place on Superior st., Walsh was knocked down and his money taken from him.

Because he was intoxicated at the time, he could not give a description of the man who acted as his escort nor tell whether he had one or more assailants. Saturday night, he declared that $700 in currency had been taken from him. Later on he gave his loss as $600. After he became sober he denied his previous statements and declared he had been robbed of $1,100.

The police learned that Walsh was drunk when he left Milwaukee Friday morning and apparently had remained in the same condition during his stay in Menasha and his visit here. He is a representative of the Wisconsin Automobile Specialty company of Milwaukee and is now introducing a new automobile appliance.

HELP CONFERENCE BY CONVERSATIONS

Washington, D. C.—Informal "conversations" between leading members of the various delegations attending the armament conference are proving the most effective way of getting results, and to this method of assuring a "meeting of minds" is being ascribed credit for much of the success which has been gained by the conference thus far.

Members of the American group are particularly industrious in this regard, most of their time between meetings of the conference or of its committees being devoted to conversations with members of foreign delegations.

Not infrequently these meetings last far into the night and deal with the most delicate and important features of the conference.

The property, some 14 acres, lies between the university and Carnegie Institute, in the educational center of the city, and on it will be erected laboratories, dedicated to chemistry, physics, mathematics, and biology.

The gift supplements a former gift of the Mellons which some years ago resulted in the opening of the Mellon Institute of Research as a part of the university.

FIRMNESS OF U. S. CHECKS PARLEY BREAK

American Answer to Jap Desire to Dicker is Unmistak- ably Plain

CAN'T REVERSE AGREEMENT

Old World Diplomacy and New World Procedure Striving to Gain Lead

By David Lawrence
Copyright, 1921, by Post Pub. Co.
Washington.—A climax has come rather unexpectedly in the armament conference. Japan has sought to vary the principles which she accepted at the outset. Under the guise of discussing "details" the Japanese have brought forward a proposal to increase the size of their navy beyond the point laid down in the Hughes program which the Japanese "accepted in principle" last Tuesday.

The answer of the American delegation to such tactics is the outstanding dramatic event of the conference. Secretary Hughes told President Harding and the entire cabinet the situation and was given full approval to go ahead with the plan he had in mind. It is that, the American naval proposals must stand as they are with respect to battleships and battle cruisers and that only by the formula of limitation announced in the Hughes program can competition be stopped.

The American answer is made in firm and unmistakably emphatic terms. The United States delegation does not mean to be drawn into such a discussion of details as will endanger the main principles which have already been accepted by Great Britain and Japan.

Principles Are Settled
When Secretary Hughes uses the word "principles" he means "principles" and when he says the "details" of the program remain to be worked out, he means "details." That's the first point which foreign delegates have failed to take into consideration. Some have imagined that acceptance "in principle" could easily be made to satisfy world opinion at the outset but that the real modification of fundamental principles could be obtained when the "details" were discussed.

Secretary Hughes fully intends to hold the conference to the literal meaning of details. He considers the principles settled.

Looking back over the first week of the conference, the most interesting thing is the clash between old world and new world procedure. The American government brought its principles out in the open and compelled the Japanese and British to answer in the open that they accepted "in principle." This was the American style of diplomacy and it carried with it immediate predictions of success and enthusiastic comments from the press of practically the whole world. Next, however, came the committee meetings where the "big five" and the "big nine" remained of the "big four" and "big ten" of Paris came into being.

The proceedings were secret. No stenographic record was kept of what was said. Immediately the Japanese and British variations upon the American naval proposals were brought forward and the public knows only through some unofficial statements from the Japanese and British sources to what extent the naval experts of each country are really trying to upset the original principles agreed upon. With the beginning of these secret committee sessions, there has coincidentally developed fears concerning an ultimate agreement. The whole atmosphere has been changed.

To offset this to some extent a change of propaganda and publicity has begun. Each delegation calls in the correspondents and explains its point of view but insists that there must be no direct quotation. The delegates virtually answer each other's statements that way through the press and a discussion is thus induced by indirection which many experienced observers of international conference think might just as well be carried on directly in open meeting.

SHOOTING AFFRAY ENDS QUARREL OVER "TWENTY"

Milwaukee—Steve Stanich, a Chicago, is in a critical condition at a hospital here with four bullet wounds in his head and Mike Vococoe, St. Paul, is being held at the police station in connection with a shooting affray Sunday afternoon. Wilmington, Ohio—A ten year old child Monday was the accused of his father, Oliver Vandervoort, under arrest here charged with a triple murder.

Vandervoort insisted he was a victim of circumstances in being found at the home of his divorced wife with the bodies of Bertha Whitlow, Vandervoort, 20, his mother, Mrs. Jeff Whitlow, and Howard Foster, 24, a victim.

His son Oliver, however, answered police queries with "papa did it." The shooting occurred at Cuba, near here, late Saturday night. Authorities believe Vandervoort was intoxicated. They found a loaded revolver in his automobile but no trace was found of the weapon believed used in the triple murder.

Vandervoort insisted he was near the house Saturday night when his son ran out and called him to help. A few minutes before he had seen the figure of a woman or man, leave the house, Vandervoort said.

Vandervoort was accused of a second shooting shortly before the triple murder. Rodney Wallace, a farmer, charged Vandervoort shot him during an argument over liquor.

PLAN TO REMOVE RESTRICTIONS ON WHISKY FOR SICK

Treasury Department is Work- ing on Revision of Prohi- bition Rulings

By United Press Leased Wire
Washington.—A sweeping revision of prohibition bureau regulations and forms, governing the distribution of whisky and other spirits for medicinal uses is about to be ordered by the treasury department.

New regulations and forms, greatly liberalizing restrictions on legitimate medicinal uses for all intoxicating beverages are to be wiped out or modified in consonance with expert legal opinions so that they will conform to the Volstead law as written, and no attempt to interpret this statute on a restrictive basis.

Treasury department officials are not in sympathy with present interpretations. Present regulations of the prohibition office, not only restrict physicians to the legal requirement of not more than one pint in any ten days to a patient, but limit the number of prescriptions which may be issued over a monthly period.

Physicians are given prescription blanks for whisky or spirited liquors in limited books. They now run 100 a month. This restriction now is viewed by treasury officials as illegal. Regulations limiting the amount of whisky which may be withdrawn by a retail druggist are also to be amended or wiped out.

Japan's Stand Has Stunned Her Foes

Her Attitude Toward China is About All That Japan's Friends Could Expect— Friendship Clears Away Mis- understandings.

By William Jennings Bryan
(Copyright 1921, by the United Press.)
Washington—Japan has delighted her friends and disappointed her enemies.

She has proposed a settlement of the Far East question that seems all that could be desired. Baron Kato presented in his statement to the committee on the Far East problems four principles that are broad enough to furnish the foundation for a permanent settlement of the controversy between Japan and China, and as a matter of fact, between China and the rest of the world.

First, the open door; second, equal opportunity in China; third, the Chinese themselves must work out their domestic situation; fourth, there shall be no interference in the internal affairs of China.

The open door and equal opportunity in China are all that other nations can ask. The right to work out their own affairs is China's chief contention. It admits China to full fellowship with the other great nations.

The policy proposed by Japan is entirely consistent with the spirit of the conference as embodied in the proposal for the reduction of armaments. Friendship and good will are to furnish the foundation upon which the relations between China and other nations will be built. What could be more desirable?

Now, it will be in order for those who have misrepresented Japan's attitude to admit their mistake and applaud "the little giant of the Orient" upon the justice and generosity of her proposition.

The three things most talked about are the extent to which the navy can be reduced, the extent to which the army can be reduced and the settlement of the overshadowing question of the Orient.

The first day cleared away all doubts as to navies. The mere announcement of the plan by Secretary Hughes assured its acceptance and the acceptance was announced even before holding the next session.

Now comes the question of land armaments, which the conference has indicated that Premier Briand explained France's situation. There can be little doubt that the delegates will address themselves to this proposition in the same spirit that they have shown the others although there may be difficulties of a different character to overcome.

The news that leaked out to the press indicated that the consultation of experts on army and navy matters does not mean that the settlement of these questions is to be turned over to the experts. It is no reflection on the professional soldier and the professional navy officer to say that they are human and like other people, which is equivalent to saying that they magnify their calling. But as this is not a time for magnifying the profession of arms, whether on land or sea, it is quite natural that the final decision should be reserved for those who take in all the other groups that constitute a nation's population.

British See No Solution Thru Briand

All Nations in Conference Sym- pathetic Toward Position of France—Japan and Others Willing to Reduce Standing Armies.

Washington—France, with the world's largest army, is ready to cut its effectiveness in half. With this official declaration by Premier Briand, the arms conference Monday began discussion of the third major task—limitation of land armament.

The cut in the French army of effectiveness could be made, Briand said, through a bill in parliament, decreasing the period of compulsory military service from three to one and one-half years.

France, however, needs a strong army because of the Russian and German "menaces," the premier said. Italy, with an army of about 500,000 men will make further reductions, Senator Schanzer, her chief delegate, said.

Not Problem in U. S.
The United States with its army of 157,000 men is not faced with the question of limiting land armaments. Secretary Hughes said, indicating that the American delegates believe this country's land force has been cut to the minimum.

Baron Kato pledged that Japan's army would be cut to the lowest point consistent with her national safety. Great Britain did not promise any definite reduction in her army.

Belgium, Baron DeCartier said, had already reduced her army to the minimum, considering her national security.

All the nations expressed sympathy with the position of France in London. The British delegation, Secretary Hughes said, was "hopeful" for any solution of the question of land armaments.

Cut One-Half
France will cut in half her effective army by reducing by 50 per cent the period of French military service, Premier Briand Monday told the conference.

While he said, is France's offering to peace.

"Tomorrow, it is certain that by action of the French government the period of military service will be cut in half," the premier said.

"As a result of this, France's army may be said to be reduced by half. Briand's pledge that France will meet effectively fighting organization in the world, came after he painted a gloomy picture of the dangers facing France.

The French period of service, which Briand said would be cut in half, is three years.

The premier made his declaration for the big cut in the French army at the close of a long speech devoted mostly to demonstrating France's need for a large army.

Appeals for Support
So long as France stands alone, Briand said, real disarmament—"moral disarmament" he called it—will not occur in Germany. It was clearly an appeal to America and Britain to put the seal of their approval on France's position, and perhaps to go further in support of her.

Faced by a German and a Russian "menace" France can go no further in land disarmament than to cut the period of her military service in half. To do more, Briand said, would endanger the safety of France.

The cut in the period of military service will not immediately reduce France's standing army, now estimated at 757,000 men.

Germany, Briand said, could put 5,000,000 men into the field within a few weeks. She had an immense industry running night and day which could produce rifles, machine guns and cannon. Plans were ready, chemicals were ready, material was at hand. The German police were all officers and non-coms, being trained to lead others. One of their duties was to prepare for war.

Held Back Bolsheviks
Turning to Russia, Briand launched at once into a brief but graphic picture of a bolshevik horde, numbering nearly six million men, ready to overrun Europe. Poland would have fallen beneath this horde, Briand said, had it not been for France's intervention.

"And after Poland, France, herself would have gone down," he said.

France, the premier said, has several times prevented war since the bolshevik because of the strength of her army.

Arthur Balfour, head of the British delegation, rose immediately after Briand's speech. He praised the speech, and declared the conference had heard Briand "with full sympathy."

Briand "told us without reserve what the French fear and why," said Balfour, "and nothing can be more useful or helpful than such an exposition."

Neither England nor America, he said, faces the menace which France finds at its door, "country great and powerful in spite of defeat. It is good for us all that we should be initiated in to the inner sanctuary of the French policy."

Britain and America are together on the question of ratios allotted.

It is most sorrowfully acknowledged, he added, that Briand's speech was not hopeful for any solution of the question of land armaments.

Balfour supported Briand's contention that there has been no "moral disarmament" either in Russia or Germany.

"Mr. Briand appears to have some fears lest France find herself in moral isolation, he continued. "That would be a tragedy indeed. That the liberties of the world in general and France in particular should be guarded from the domination of her eastern neighbor is the policy for which the British empire fought and in which it still believes."

Carlo Schanzer of Italy's group, responded to Briand following Balfour. He spoke in French, explaining that he wished "Italy's thought to arrive directly across the table" to the French delegation.

Italy, Schanzer said, was always on the side of peace. He declared his countrymen sought to live in accord with their neighbors.

Italy has already made considerable military reductions, he said. "We are morally at the side of France. But may I express the wish and hope the limitation of land armaments may soon become possible?"

Italy's army today does not exceed 200,000 men, and further reductions are planned.

Baron Kato responded on Japan's behalf. He spoke in Japanese. After expressing Japan's appreciation of the sympathy for the sacrifices in men and wealth by France, Great Britain, Italy and the United States, Kato said:

"Japan is quite ready to announce her support of the people of relieving the burdens of the people by reducing land armaments to the limit of national security and the preservation of order. Japan has not the slightest intention of maintaining land armament in excess of defensive necessities of the Far East situation."

Hughes assured that the American people would read his speech with understanding. What is needed to make progress possible is candor and frankness such as Briand employed.

"Then the will to peace may have its way," said Hughes.

Without attempting to outline at this time detailed practical means for land disarmament, Hughes said he felt sure the expressions from the various powers made it certain that the conference could find ways of dealing with it. The conference, he said, would "generate that disposition towards peace which is a greater security than armies, officers, guns and war material—the will to have peace."

The conference then sent the question of land armament to the committee on armaments, composed of the heads of delegations of the five leading powers. Adjournment then was taken, subject to Hughes call.

The naval limitation question is "progressing favorably," Hughes reported to the conference, opening the moment to report to the plenary session "either as to naval armaments or Far Eastern questions but that "our expectations in both are being realized."

Going directly to the question on land armaments, Hughes said that while the United States had been able to reduce to less than 150,000 men this government conditions abroad, and understands the apprehensions and other causes, which have prevented other nations likewise reducing their land forces. The fullest discussion of the question is invited by the United States, he said.

Record Breaking Crowd Will Hear Noted Harpist

Alberto Salvi

A record breaking crowd is expected to hear Alberto Salvi, world famous harpist, when he appears in recital in Lawrence Memorial chapel Wednesday evening as the third number of the Community Lecture and Artist series. The ticket sale for this number is exceptionally large. Salvi deserves a large crowd, according to music critics everywhere. He is without doubt the greatest harpist in America and probably in the world. He can get more music out of a harp than many of the masters believed was in the instrument. The common opinion that the harp is suitable only as an instrument for accompaniment will surely be dissipated by the young artist when he plays here Wednesday evening.

The program committee in charge of the Community Lecture and Artist series considered his number one of the features of the year. The commendation they have received since the announcement of the program has encouraged them to believe it is one of the finest numbers ever secured for Appleton.

FIRST PLEDGE DAY IS HUGE SUCCESS

Voluntary pledge day, as conducted by the First Congregational church Sunday afternoon to raise its annual budget, brought total pledges of more than $11,000 from people who visited the church on their own initiative and made their subscriptions for the year.

The success thus far achieved proved that voluntary pledging is possible and that pledges day is out of the experimental stage. This amount was subscribed by about one-fourth of the members, leaving approximately 1,000 still to make pledges.

A second opportunity will be given those unable to come Sunday to make their pledges between 3:30 and 5:30 Thanksgiving afternoon at the six booths in the church parlors.

money early in February in order to take advantage of many discounts offered for cash by the printers and engravers.

Several years ago, the weekly paper subscription price was made a part of the fee charged at the beginning of the year thus doing away with the solicitation for subscriptions. The plan has worked well and the officers were enabled to spend their time on other phases of the publication. It also avoided the nuisance of solicitors going to the students. The yearbook will work on the same basis this year and its success will be the indicator of the permanency of the plan for future books.

DETROIT COUPLE ARE BENEFITED

George Page and Wife Now Enjoying Splendid Health After Years of Suffering

"Anyone who has been helped by Tanlac like I have certainly ought to let others know about the medicine," said George Page, 5731 Mandale Ave., Detroit, Mich.

"For a number of years I had a complication of troubles, and they had about the best of me when I ran across Tanlac. I suffered terribly from indigestion and dyspepsia, and my stomach was so upset, that I could scarcely retain a thing that I managed to force down. Gas formed after every meal and pressed against my heart until it almost knocked me breathless. I had to be taking something all the time for constipation, and had, such attacks of dizziness that I often fell over while at my work. I had paid out lots of money for medicines and treatments without getting any results, and was just about 'all in'."

"So many people told us about Tanlac that my wife insisted on my taking it. Well, my improvement was rapid, and six bottles have knocked my troubles sky high. I haven't an ailment of any kind now, but eat good, sleep good and feel fine in every way. My wife has also used Tanlac with splendid results, and we think there is nothing else like it."

Tanlac is sold in Appleton by Volat Drug Co. and by leading druggists everywhere.

Faculty members and their wives will entertain the trustees at a banquet and reception at Russell Sage dormitory in the evening.

AGAIN WE LEAD THE WORLD

It perhaps is not too much to say that most if not all of the prestige lost by the United States by its post-war meanderings and evasions of responsibility has been restored by the Washington conference. When Europe and Asia responded to the invitation of President Harding to come to this country and discuss armament and other delicate questions of international relationship they had the record of this government since the signing of the armistice from which chiefly to interpret our motive. Having been deserted at the peace table, France and Italy naturally were skeptical. Great Britain had had the assurances of Col. Harvey that we fought only for selfishness and because we were afraid not to fight. He had also warned Premiers Lloyd George and Briand that the United States would never enter into an alliance, expressed or implied, with other nations for any purpose. The senatorial policy of isolation had seemed to triumph in the rejection of the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations and in the making of a separate peace with Germany.

Mr. Hughes in the short space of an hour or so wiped out the indictment that had caused delegates from Europe and Asia to come to Washington to deal with us at arms' length. The very greatness of his proposal, the magnanimity and sincerity in which it was offered, the stern inflexibility of Hughes' morality, dissipated the fears and suspicions of the conferees and replaced America, as if by a stroke of the pen, to the world leadership we had attained under the guiding hand of President Wilson. Once again we rose to the heights of April 6th, 1917, of our training camps and our Liberty loans, of Chateau Thierry. Once again we were ready to serve humanity, once more prepared to make the world safe for democracy. The historic words uttered by the American secretary of state breathed the tremendous fact that in these few minutes of time sentence of death had been passed upon future naval aggression. In a different manner, by a different road, but reaching the same destination, the president of the United States, with an adamant secretary of state at his right arm, had achieved much of what his predecessor had sought and lost at Versailles.

The Washington conference marks the definite entrance of the United States into world affairs. It is not the foreign entanglement against which Washington cautioned us, but it plainly paves the way to the association of nations contemplated in that existing organization with which Mr. Lodge and Hiram Johnson would not permit us to affiliate. The policy of isolation is consigned to the past. The shibboleth of super-government has faded in thin air. America stands ready to join with the rest of the world in those measures and those undertakings which will contribute to peace and banish war. There cannot be the slightest doubt that it is this ideal which actuates both President Harding and Mr. Hughes. The agreement about to be made for the limitation of armament and an understanding in the Orient and the Pacific are preliminary to larger engagements which ultimately will embrace the purposes and objects of the League of Nations, and with equally effective instruments of enforcement.

GETTING TOGETHER

The possibilities of "open covenants openly arrived at" are well illustrated in the case of 40,000 employees in the packing industry of Chicago, who have just voted to accept a ten per cent reduction in wages. The companies with which the men agreed to take a cut are Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. It is the first time in the history of the packing industry that a wage reduction has been arrived at in the manner employed in Chicago. Representatives of the management and employees simply gathered about a table and thrashed the question out to the satisfaction of all. The companies placed their cards on the table face up. They submitted statements of their business, placed their books at the disposal of the committee and at the end of two days a unanimous agreement was reached. The men accepted the cut in the best of feeling, convinced it was necessary if the companies were to continue to operate profitably and keep themselves in a position to furnish work.

The method employed to bring about an amicable understanding is known as the industrial management plan. It is in effect in some of the paper mills in the Fox River valley and it is being tried in many other industries throughout the country. Thus far it has seemed to be a distinct improvement over the old forms of collective bargaining. It rests primarily on the doctrine of the square deal. It means the settlement of labor questions directly between employers and employees, with the added distinction that the employees are given a hand in the management of the business so far as it relates to their interests and problems. Before the relationship is entered into there must be an honest intention on the part of both to deal fairly and openly. Where this is done the case of neither side is prejudiced, but where it is not done the plan is doomed to failure from the beginning. It all depends upon whether employers and employees are sincerely determined to work together, to share prosperity equitably, to cease trying to take advantage of each other. It is the substitution of reason and morality for force. The industrial management system is certain to grow in favor because it is the natural way to harmonize the interests of employers and employees, and certainly this desire has taken root and is growing throughout the country. Ultimately it must be the means of setting our industrial house in order.

ULSTER AND IRELAND

The Irish conference is to be resumed this week with certain facts clearly in view. Great Britain has come to an agreement, at least tentatively, with the Sinn Fein, conditioned only upon the assent of Ulster. After months of preliminary skirmishing, conferences, breaks and resump-tions, Great Britain and Ireland have come to an understanding which will admit of their dwelling together in political unity and harmony.

At this juncture, however, Ulster, which throughout the negotiations has loomed as a possible obstacle to settlement, steps in and says there can be no settlement which involves a surrender of her rights. Ulster now enjoys a ministerial-parliamentary government under which she regulates her domestic affairs. She enjoys certain guarantees and safeguards. These include her religious freedom, the security of her property rights and the fullest measure of local government. Just how a united Ireland is to deprive her of these rights is not apparent. On the contrary the plan of union assures to her the full enjoyment of the privileges on which she places so high an estimate. There is nothing to indicate that anything is to be taken from her in local self-government. She is to be linked with the south of Ireland through the common Irish council, a body which has jurisdiction only over national affairs as they may affect the country as a whole.

At least one-third of the 1,200,000 people of Ulster are Catholics and presumably in sympathy with Irish national aspirations. That 800,000 people should set themselves up against the will of more than 4,000,000 of their fellow countrymen, as well as against the will of England, Scotland, Wales and the dominions, in the peaceful solution of an age-long controversy is hardly conceivable. The idea that Ulster will be deprived of religious liberty in a nationalized Ireland is an inheritance of days that have faded into history. The world no longer tolerates religious persecution or discrimination in civilized countries. It will not be tolerated in Ulster; in fact, it is not even threatened.

The use of force against Ulster is not contemplated, but it would be nothing less than a crime if the Irish settlement were prevented by obstinacy on her part. It remains to win Ulster over by the irresistible pressure of logic and reason, by the application of common sense and appeal to national sentiment, and if any person is likely to succeed in this undertaking it is Mr. Lloyd George.

EXHIBIT A

Mothers of girls ought to find the following contribution by a girl something to think about:

Dear Dr. Brady:

In reading yours entitled "Didn't Raise My Boy" I was struck by your remark thereof that "to withhold knowledge every boy and girl should have until high school age is too late, tragically late. In the interim they are pretty sure to be taught things by outsiders, and in a tainted way."

Oh, I am so glad you brought that home. I am a young girl—still called a little girl—and thought of as a little girl by my parents, too young or too little to be told the truth.

Some people would not believe that I didn't know I was doing wrong when I believed a man after my mother had deceived me. Well, all I can say is that God sent a true friend to me before my whole life was wrecked—but if my mother had not been so afraid that I would know things too young I know I would never have received the blot on my otherwise happy young girlhood that I now have. I was taught carefully enough in other things.

Tell mothers this—all children love secrets, and if we don't have them with our mothers we will have them with some one else.

I love my mother and would die if she suspected this of me, but I can't help feeling it was partly her fault.

It makes me shudder to think what I might have been if I had not been told the truth by a good woman. As soon as I heard the truth, I realized I was doing wrong.

I am now trying to live right, and your little lessons in right living are a great help. I just wanted to say thank you!

Yours sincerely,

Discounting a certain tendency of girls of 15 or 17 to see grave faults in their parents, I take it that our young correspondent tells a pretty straightforward story. Just what she refers to need not concern us, but I hope all parents of girls, and especially mothers, will never forget what this girl wishes me to tell mothers.

"All children love secrets, and if we don't have them with our mothers, we will with some one else." There is a whole chapter of psychology in that bit of pure philosophy. It is a complete sermon in itself.

Think it over, mothers.

Are you evading anything?

If you have no "secrets" with your little girls, is that because you think your little girls are entirely different from ordinary, normal little girls? Or is it because you are incapable of teaching your little girls what they should know? Don't deceive yourselves!

If you are not prepared to teach your little girls what they should know, it is your duty to study such books or other aids as may be available—and there are many such aids available—to equip a mother to have all the "secrets" with her daughters that the daughters naturally "love," as our young correspondent puts it. I have a list of pamphlets and books of this kind which I shall be glad to send to mothers. Or to fathers of boys.

I don't believe a mother can begin too early to teach her little girl the sacred truth of life. I am sure a father cannot begin too early to share the wisdom of a father with his little boys.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Laxative Habit

Will the regular use of — as a laxative cure constipation?—(D. M. E.)

Answer—No. It is the regular, frequent or habitual resort to artificial aids that usually causes constipation. Proper training of the bowel and careful avoidance of such harmful drugs and devices, will usually take care of constipation.

The Great Cause

What is the cause of head lice?—(C. E.)

Answer—The same as the cause of goldfish and grizzly bears. Now they wait, then they mate, presently they propagate, two by two and eight by eight or some such algebraic rate. In mathematics, people beg can't keep such things in my head. The first pair? From some loving friend. And here my cootie tale must end.

His Brother's Second Cousin

Please tell me whether there is any harm done when first cousins marry.—(M. O.)

Answer—Religious laws, and in some states civil laws forbid such marriages. Interbreeding tends toward deterioration, whereas the introduction of new stock tends toward race betterment. If there is any heritable taint or defect or weakness in the family, the union of first cousins doubles the chance of defective offspring. No child should be his own second cousin, or his brother's.

Books for Girls

Kindly tell me of some suitable books on sex matters for my daughters, aged 17 and 20 years.—(Mrs. R.)

Answer—Send to public health service, Washington, D. C., for free pamphlets on sex hygiene for girls and young women, or for boys, or for young men, as the case may be. A good book for girls and mothers of girls is one of that name by Mary G. Hood, M. D., published by the Dobs-Merrill Co., New York City, $1.50. Last ultimatum. Probably your public library has it.

Henna

What is your advice regarding henna treatments for camouflaging gray hair?—(Mrs. J. H. J.)

Answer—Harmless and all right if regularly repeated and applied by a skillful hair dresser.

A Two Power Conference

By Frederic J. Haskin

Washington, D. C.—That there are but two world powers, and that the effort to reach an agreement between them is the only way to stabilize international relations enough to permit the reduction of naval armaments, is the view held by many of the best informed observers.

The two powers, of course, are the United States and Great Britain. France and Italy are powers in Europe but in their present condition, neither of them can alone exert a decisive influence upon world affairs.

Japan is a rising power, but she is not a world power if she stands alone. Her important part in the international affairs of the last 20 years has been made possible by her alliance with England.

The public is prone to regard the conference as an effort to make war impossible by agreements for the reduction of armaments to the point where the nations will not be able to fight. As a matter of fact, the conference is a phase of the disarmament movement.

Military disarmament probably will not even be discussed. Naval armaments will at most be limited in such a way as to reduce the burdens of taxation and perhaps pave the way for further reduction at some future time. But such a reduction would not make war impossible or even much more improbable than it now is.

There are in the world certain forces of military and economic imperialism which make for war. They are present in all of the countries represented at the conference except China. But in some other countries they are more clearly dominant than in others. To curb these forces is the real object of the conference, or at least, its best hope of taking a step toward insuring peace.

The conference will be another great exhibition of diplomatic skill in world affairs. It will make another world war impossible for a long time. During that time the revolution of men against war, which has been slowly growing since the Middle Ages, will have a chance to grow stronger still.

The growth of this feeling is the only thing that can ever really prevent war. Governments, inevitably make wars, but when the common sentiment of the people is against them, the governments will be disarmed indeed.

Japan's Policy

One of the countries in which the imperialistic feeling is most clearly dominant is Japan. That fact is recognized, and admitted upon all sides. Japan has enforced her will in Manchuria and Siberia. She has seized Shantung and imposed her 21 points upon China. These moves are clearly the beginning of a course of economic and military imperialism in Asia which would inevitably cause another war sooner or later.

Further, another war sooner or later, because this course on the part of Japan is inimical to the United States, because this country is committed to a policy of maintaining the open door (equal economic opportunity for all nations) in China, and of insuring China's national integrity and autonomy.

This policy is embodied in the Open Door Policy, which has been assented to by practically all of the other nations of the world, but it has been violated by all of them in deeds, and especially Japan with the support of Great Britain. The United States must either check this violation of her traditional policy with regard to China or else she must withdraw entirely from the Pacific, leaving China to her fate.

There are some pacifists who appear to favor the latter course. They say that if the United States disarmed and withdrew from the international struggle, other nations would eventually follow suit. But this is rather hard to prove. It seems more probable that if the United States withdrew her influence from the Orient she would merely leave it an open field for the imperialistic ambitions of other nations, and that she would eventually have to encounter this imperialism when it was much stronger than it is today.

If then the United States is to remain a factor in the Pacific it is clear that the chief force with which she has to contend is the imperialism of Japan, supported by Great Britain.

It is of the utmost importance that the American public should understand these facts. But nothing would be more unfortunate than for that understanding to create feeling against either Japan or Great Britain. There are liberal and anti-militarist forces in Japan just as there are in Great Britain. Likewise there are militaristic and imperialistic forces in the United States. The situation should be regarded as a struggle of liberal forces in all countries against war-making forces in all countries.

The Japanese who is liberal and wants peace and disarmament is an ally of the American in the same frame of mind. And with regard to Japan it must be remembered that Japan's whole rise in the world has been by war, and that she owes her very existence as a nation to her army and navy. She is the only nation in Asia that has not been overwhelmed and exploited by the Europeans. She has preserved her integrity by taking a gun and she knows it. It cannot be a matter for surprise, then, that she is not quick to lay down that gun.

Anglo-Jap Alliance

None-the-less world peace depends largely upon the renunciation by Japan of her imperialistic ambitions in Asia generally and in China in particular. These ambitions are made possible largely by the alliance with Great Britain. If this alliance with Great Britain, if this alliance with Japan will be weakened, and without losing anything that is rightfully hers, Japan will probably be forced to adopt a foreign policy less menacing to her neighbors and to the peace of the world.

It is clear that a leading object of the conference for the United States is to prevent a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. It is here, in the opinion of experts, that our diplomacy will be tested. The alliance will probably be explained as one that does not in any way menace our interests. It is probable, too, that we will be invited to join it, making it a triple alliance.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance has been an extremely profitable relation for both of the principals. They have both gained immensely. But not give it up without a struggle. It is a triple alliance.

The best interests of this country is that American interests in the world be protected by a complete divorce of British and Japanese interests, and a definite alignment of Great Britain behind American Pacific policy.

It should not be forgotten that international agreements, often have clauses which are not published, and sometimes work out in ways that could scarcely be guessed from their wording. It seems probable that American diplomacy and American public opinion should stand firmly against any sort of Anglo-Japanese alliance, regardless of its wording or of its projected inclusion of this country.

By reason of her financial strength alone, America is in a position to enforce her point of view if her representatives are shrewd enough. American diplomacy was outwitted at Versailles. It has been outwitted at least, once since then. Undoubtedly there are many persons who expect it to be outwitted again in Washington.

THE QUESTION BOX

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C., who will offer advice on legal, medicinal, and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give name, address and enclose ten-cent stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

Q. Were the medals which were put on the casket of the "Unknown Soldier" buried, or were they removed?—A. B. C.

A. The hunting flag which covered the casket on its journey from France, was buried with the body of the Unknown Soldier. The silk flag which covered the casket while the body lay in state and during the funeral ceremony, was removed, together with all medals conferred by foreign governments and our own.

The present plan is to have a case made to hold flag and medals, and place it in the archives of the Amphitheater at Arlington, where it may be seen by visitors to the tomb of the Unknown Dead.

Q. When was the talking machine invented?—C. S.

A. An apparatus for the recording of the human voice was known as early as the thirteenth century when a device was made by Albertus Magnus, the philosopher.

Q. What is an unroofed minister?—D. E. W.

A. An unroofed minister is a term used to denote a man who, having accepted the holy orders and been ordained by the authorities of the church with which he is affiliated, has transgressed the laws of decency or morality and been declared unfit to administer the sacraments. Ordination administered by such a man would not be considered valid by the governing body of his church.

Q. What is a Queen's Pipe?—G. C. M.

A. The Queen's Tobacco Pipe, also known as King's Tobacco Pipe, is a nickname popularly given to a kind of peculiar shape in a corner of the London dock warehouses. Formerly contraband goods, such as tea, cigars, and tobacco, which had been smuggled in were burned. Now only damaged or worthless goods are sold periodically.

Q. How many miles of telephone wires are there in the United States?—A. B. C.

A. In 1917 there were 28,527,133 miles of telephone wires in the United States.

Q. When people burn corn instead of coal, does it mean shelled corn or corn on the ear?—J. G. E.

A. Corn can be burned in either condition, but the ear might well be burned as it has heat value.

Q. What is the unit of force?—A. M. W.

A. The unit of force is that force which, acting on one gram of matter for one second, will change its velocity of one centimeter per second. It is called the dyne. It is approximately the force exerted by a milligram weight under the influence of gravity.

Q. How many Secretaries of State has England?—W. R. C.

A. There are now in the United Kingdom five principal Secretaries of State, appointed respectively for foreign affairs, domestic affairs, colonies, and India. The first authentic record of the office of Secretary of State is in the reign of Henry III, when John Maunsell is described as "secretarius noster."

Q. Would a tin roof affect a wire less receiving set?—A. C. M.

A. A tin roof would affect a wire less set. It should be well insulated.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

The Tax Outlook

The tax revision bill has passed both houses of Congress and is now in conference, and while in the opinion of most American papers it is largely "Hobson's choice" as between the two measures, neither of them being found satisfactory, it is felt that on the whole the senate bill is the more acceptable. A summary of similarities and differences is given in the PHILADELPHIA RECORD (Ind. Dem.) this:

"Both House and Senate voted for a personal income tax of 4 per cent up to $5,000 and 8 per cent above. But the House bill would limit the surtax to 32 per cent on incomes of $66,000 and the Senate would carry it up to 50 per cent on incomes above $200,000. The surtax would begin at $5,000 in the House and $6,000 in the Senate bill. In both bills transportation taxes are repealed from January 1 next. The corporation income tax is 10 per cent under the present law, 12½ under the House bill, and 15 under the Senate bill. Both bills raise the exemption in the income tax of the head from $2,000 to $2,500."

The Senate bill, the RECORD continues, "would raise nearly half a billion more than the House bill, but more than $600,000,000 less than the present law would."

These differences in details are of course "important," the INDIANAPOLIS NEWS (Ind.) says, "but on the main principles there seems to be substantial agreement. Therefore the work of the conference committee ought not to be difficult nor long drawn out."

The "chief hitch," the KNOXVILLE SENTINEL (Ind. Dem.) thinks, will come in adjusting the difference "between the Senate surtax maximum rate of 50 per cent, and the House rate of 32 per cent," an item on which the House conferees will have to ask instruction. In this respect the CHATTANOOGA NEWS (Dem.) regards the Senate bill as "an improvement over the House bill," and the LINCOLN (Nebr.) STATE JOURNAL (Ind. Rep.) remarks that "ten years ago it would have been esteemed a radical measure."

Developing this idea, the ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT (Rep.) commenting on the surtax and the increase in corporation income tax from 12½ to 15 per cent, as provided by the Senate, thinks that in the conflict over the very important differences "the House will have the better of the argument from the standpoint of the country's welfare, but the Senate will have the better of it from the standpoint of votes."

It is "a curious transformation," it observes, "that has reversed the traditional position of the two houses, the House becoming the conservative body, while the Senate, which was established by the constitution as a conservative body, has become the popular and relatively radical division of Congress."

The CHICAGO JOURNAL (Dem.) "has looked for something good to say" about the Senate bill and has found two items: It "abolishes most of the remaining nuisance taxes" and "imposes a heavy inheritance tax on large estates," which "the paper thinks is a good feature indeed."

For the rest, it "ranges from indifferent to bad, with the bad predominating." In general the MILWAUKEE JOURNAL (Ind.) finds it "a mere shuffle of the cards, a few increases here and reductions there, substituting a manufacturers' tax for a consumers' tax so that the taxpayer won't know he is paying it," but practically "the whole war-time emergency system stays."

Eliminations, the HARTFORD TIMES (Dem.) agrees, "have been of minor nature," and the bill is unsatisfactory for the further reason that "it continues in practice the evil forms of taxation against which the public has protested."

The Senate bill "abolishes all transportation taxes from January 1 next," the NEW YORK TRIBUNE (Rep.) notes, which is "better than reducing them by half," it "ranges from indifferent to bad," the PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN (Ind. Rep.) points out

"a mark-off of twenty dollars a year in the direct Federal tax bill of all persons having a taxable income of $5,000 or less," which, together with the abolition of the transportation taxes, "equivalent to an eight per cent reduction in railroad fares," and sundry "luxury" and "nuisance" taxes, "constitute the benefits of tax reduction downward as they will affect the great majority of people directly."

But even as it stands, reducing "our tax burdens by three-quarters of a billion dollars a year," the ILLINOIS STATE JOURNAL (Springfield, Rep.) fears that "the average man in the street will scarcely know that anything has been lifted from his back."

The revision, the OKLAHOMA CITY OKLAHOMAN (Dem.) grants, "gives some relief to heads of small-income families, by increasing their exemption," but, it adds, "affords no relief to the many small-income individuals who are not heads of families," and while the bill fails "to give needed relief to business and to small-income individuals, it reduces the tax on large individual incomes," a discrimination "that many people will consider unfair."

That this discrimination has not passed without notice is evidenced by some comments as that of the ROCHESTER TIMES UNION (Ind.) that "the reductions, while having much sound economic reasoning behind them, are made mainly in the rates paid by prosperous corporations and individuals with large incomes," and the NEW YORK GLOBE (Ind.) which finds that "the chief beneficiaries of both measures are the very affluent individuals who formerly paid disproportionately high surtaxes, and the corporations who were hard hit by the excess profits tax."

In short, the GLOBE continues, the legislation "represents a remarkable series of compromises and adjustments arising out of the necessity of taking away with one hand in order to fill the treasury, and giving back with the other in order to keep production pledged." The NORFOLK VIRGINIAN PILOT (Ind. Dem.) also feels that "the class that will receive maximum direct benefits from these provisions are the very rich and those engaged in the most lucrative business," and in this connection, while "a lowering of excess profits taxes was undoubtedly warranted," the paper feels that "it is by no means apparent that their repeal in toto is justified."

Married in Pajamas
Clad in pajamas, socks and slippers and a long raincoat, a bridegroom recently hurried into a London register office to be married, reports the LONDON MAIL. He was staying in a neighboring hotel, and had some days previously taken out a license to be married early in the morning, an hour before the usual opening time. He told the registrar that an early ceremony was desired as his fiancée and himself wanted to catch a train immediately after the ceremony.

"Arriving in a closed car he entered the office with just about six inches of his pajamas showing, below the raincoat, and apologizing to the registrar for his dress turned to greet his fiancée, who was waiting for him."

"She smiled, and he explained that he had overslept, and if he had waited to dress they would have Ravenswood, W. Va.—"For seven long years I suffered from a female trouble and inflammation so that I was not able to do my housework. I consulted several doctors but none seemed to give me relief. I read in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to try it, and before the first bottle was gone I found great relief so I continued using it until I had taken eight bottles. Now I am very well and can do my own housework. I can gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA LIERING, R. F. D., Ravenswood, W. Va.

INCREASE OF 350 IN NUMBER OF CARS OWNED IN APPLETON

Automobiles Owned in Outagamie County now Valued at $2,138,891

People of Appleton own 350 more automobiles than they did last year and there is an increase of 1,125 in the number of automobiles owned in Outagamie-co.

This is shown by the 1921 report of John A. Lonsdorff, assessor of incomes, to the Outagamie board of supervisors. The increase is approximately 25 per cent of the number owned in the county last year.

In 1920 there were 1,133 automobiles in Appleton. Now there are 1,483. The county had 4,322 last year but this year it has 5,445.

The number of automobiles in other places in the county is as follows: Kaukauna, 324; Greenville, 242; Dale, 157; Grand Chute, 213; Center, 211; Seymour township, 182; Seymour, 151; Freedom, 166; Black Creek, 152.

The increase in the number of automobiles has increased the true value of these machines $248,797 over the true value for 1920, but the assessed value of all automobiles is $533,978 more than the assessed value last year.

The true value of the county's automobiles is $2,138,891 compared with $1,889,094 last year. The assessed value is $2,239,263 this year and last year it was $1,836,153. Motorcycles in the county are valued at $2,665 compared with $419 last year.

THE FIRE OF CRITICISM

HEALTH TALK

No. 48

By

JAMES A. ROLFE, D. C.

Health turns the Clock Backward

Seldom have new ideas been launched into the world which did not first pass thru a fire of criticism. People are never ready to receive anything that is revolutionary, or contrary to accepted thought and custom.

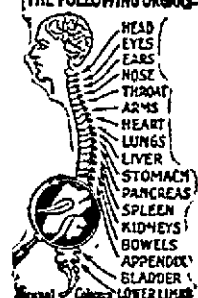

A world that was taught to accept "Dis-Ease" as unavoidable in life's experience could not at first understand the Chiropractic idea that all ailments are the result of vertebrae interference with the life forces of the body; that by simple adjusting, without the aid of drugs or knife, the cause could be corrected and normal condition restored.

CHIROPRACTIC IS REVOLUTIONARY

Thousands who formerly suffered are now enjoying health. They were not blinded by custom, and lifted the veil of skepticism to look into the wonders wrought by Chiropractic.

Outagamie County RED CROSS Activities

What your Red Cross Chapter has done during the past year to make your County a better place to live in.

2235 Nursing visits were made by Red Cross nurses in Outagamie County.
450 County women have received instruction in Home nursing.
254 County people were examined at a Chest Clinic in Oneida, financed by Red Cross.
17 Children had operations, financed by Red Cross.

The cost to the Chapter for the above services	$4645
Assistance of various sorts rendered our ex-service men cost	1820
Maintaining office headquarters, including rent, light and phone	695
The new garment work just started has cost	65
Renting, equipping rest rooms and first aid service, two County Fairs	60
Total spent	$7285

There has been minor expense connected with emergency calls. Many Appleton people have contributed dollars, cars and time in volunteer service for the County as a whole. $2955 was sent to National headquarters at Washington as our share in national and international relief. This sum represented 50c out of each $1.00 membership collected. The other 50c of each membership remains in the branch treasury for peace time work in that branch. Any districts desiring to retain its half of the memberships can do so by electing branch officers.

THE PROGRAM FOR THE COMING YEAR INCLUDES WORK AT HOME AND ABROAD

- 1 There is an increasing need among disabled ex-service men for Red Cross assistance. This is our first obligation.
- 2 The demand for Red Cross Public Health nursing is increasing.
- 3 There is a demand on the part of County women for further health instruction in food classes, home nursing and nutrition. We must meet this demand.
- 4 There are many crippled and sick children in the County still needing Red Cross care.
- 5 Outagamie County's garment quota of 193 baby outfits and 1183 children's garments has only been started. Besides new quotas will be received.
- 6 There is continual demand for emergency service of various kinds, including assistance to civilian families.

In addition to all this, we must anticipate the national and international need for Red Cross. There were 71 great disasters last year for which Red Cross furnished millions toward relief. Millions have been spent to furnish medical care for suffering children everywhere. The need is increasing.

INGROWN TOE NAIL TURNS OUT ITSELF

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin under, beneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic, manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

Note the Wonderful Record of Fire Insurance Investments

An ex-insurance commissioner of Illinois said in one of his reports a few years ago that "there is no other business of similar magnitude in the United States which enjoys such enormous profits as the fire insurance business."

In 1919 thirty-three companies (a list chosen at random from all the American companies) showed an average percentage of net income to capital of 195.7, after deducting all losses and expenses.

These companies paid cash dividends that year averaging 23 per cent, even counting large stock dividends declared by some of them!

Look at the official records and see the present book values of stock in established companies—most of them three, four and five dollars for every dollar invested; one of them with a book value fifteen times greater than par.

These are facts—provable in any public insurance department.

Our proposition calls for the sale of 100,000 shares in the Chicago Fire & Marine Insurance Company, at $25.00 per share.

We expect to do a profitable business the first year, a large amount of reinsurance being available from other companies right now. Besides reinsurance, in which we will first operate, we expect to direct writing through agencies in the principal cities.

There is an actual demand for what we have to sell—a demand greater than existing facilities to take care of it. More insurance companies are needed to carry the normal business of the country and to absorb the insurance once written by German, Austrian, Bulgarian and Russian companies which are not now operating in this country.

LOTS OF CORN BUT FEW ONIONS RAISED IN STATE IN 1921

Corn Crop Breaks all Records — Two-Thirds Normal Crop of Potatoes

This year Wisconsin harvested the biggest crop of corn the state ever produced according to the November crop report issued Wednesday by the division of agricultural statistics at Madison, but the 1920 crop of onions was less than one fifth the quantity harvested last year.

It is estimated that the state's crop of corn will total 91,050,000 bushels which is about five million bushels more than last year's crop.

All K. of P. wishing to go to Fond du Lac Tuesday, 5:30 P. M., call Buchanan at 2:30.

and thirty-three million bushels more than the average crop of the last five years. The yield per acre was 46 bushels or about 10 bushels more than the average yield in the last 10 years.

Only $51,000 acres of corn in the state was cut for silage this year compared to 559,000 acres cut for silage in 1920. The decrease in acreage does not mean that fewer silos were filled but it indicates that the crop was "heavier" and less acreage was required. In fact more silos were filled in 1921 than in 1920. Corn for silage yielded about nine tons per acre which is a ton more than the average.

Small Potato Crop
The corn crop for the whole United States was the second largest in the history of the country. It is estimated at 3,152,000 bushels compared to the average crop of 2,798,000 bushels.

Spuds were exhumed this fall to the amount of 21,459,000 bushels which is only about two-thirds of last year's crop and three-fourths of the average crop in the last five years. The yield was only 69 bushels to the acre in comparison to the average yield of 103 bushels.

Production of potatoes for the whole country is believed to be about 75,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop. The shortage in a few states has been counterbalanced by a heavy yield in other states so that the average yield per acre is $9 bushels.

Wisconsin's tobacco crop was heavier this year than it has been in any previous year. The unprecedented hot summer resulted in rapid and luxuriant growth of the plants and there was practically no loss through retarded growth and early frosts. The crop is estimated at 31,000 tons and the average yield was more than half a ton to the acre.

Less Sauerkraut
A big decrease in the crop of sugar beets is attributed by the report to an unfavorable dry season. The yield is estimated at 137,000 tons which is about 79,000 tons less than last year's crop.

A decrease of 250 per cent in the cabbage crop is blamed on plant diseases and unfavorable weather conditions which hindered the growth of the plants and added their insect enemies. Only 61,000 tons were produced as compared to 156,000 tons last year. No reason is assigned for the tremendous decrease in the production of onions. This year only 91,000 bushels were harvested and last year the production was 552,000 bushels. While it is conceded that last year's onion crop was exceptionally large it is also pointed out that in the past the state has produced an average crop of 234,000 bushels of onions.

SPEECH ARTS CLUB OUTLINES PROGRAM

College Organization Will Spend Year in the Study of Drama

The Speech Arts Club of Lawrence college has completed the outline of its program for the year. The club is made up of students in the upper classes who are taking up work in dramatic action and public speaking. On Nov. 29, Miss Lva Johnson will read "Wee Willie Winkie," and Miss Esther Baldwin will read a paper on modern playwrights.

At the next meeting Dec. 13, a one act play will be given by members of the club. The Jan 10 program will be one on the technique and mechanism of the movies by Lawrence France and E. B. Hunting. Miss Leah Wildhagen will discuss community plays at the meeting of Jan. 24. Prof. F. W. Orr will give the program on Feb. 7.

The meeting of Feb. 21 will be the second one act play to be given by the club. It will be especially noteworthy since the play, "Behind the Pillars," was written by Miss Esther Baldwin, a member of the club and a prominent journalist on the campus. The scene of the play is laid on the steps of Lawrence Memorial chapel and the time is the beginning of the year when sophomore and freshman rivalry is keen.

Miss Evelyn Gerritt has charge of the program for March 21 which will consist of readings and musical numbers. A vaudeville number under the direction of Lawrence France will be given on March 21. The staging of high school plays, lighting and make-up will be taken up on April 4 under the direction of Mathilda Harriman.

A novel costume party will be given on April 15 when the members of the club will come dressed to represent some historical or modern character and will read a portion of the play from which the character was taken in order to show how well the characterization was followed. During May, the club probably will work on a community play to be presented before the close of the college year.

EDUCATION WEEK TO BE WIDELY OBSERVED

Jazz Music Has Lost Its Popularity With Appleton Music Lovers

Demand for "Dime Novel of Music" Never Was Heavy in Appleton, Music Dealers Say — Like "Peppy" Dance Music

A writer in a recent magazine said that the young people in America were jazzing themselves to perfection but not so in Appleton for the original jazz music has passed out of date and lost favor in Appleton six months or more ago. Music dealers are unanimous in their condemnation of the noisy records which appeared following the advent of "Livery Stable Blues," put out by the Victor people in April, 1917.

"Jazz such as played by the Dixieland Jazz orchestra was never popular in Appleton," said Mrs. E. F. Carroll of the Carroll Music Store. "Our customers have always demanded the better class of dance music. It is an interesting fact that many of the 'red seal' artists are now playing some of the better popular selections. Some Victor musicians made one or two jazzy records, but you will find that few made more than that. Dance music now has a nice rhythm but it has got away from the very noisy kind."

Dime Novel of Music
"Jazz is the dime novel of music," said Carl G. Seeger of the Meyer-Seeger company. "A demand for that type of music is merely a matter of lack of appreciation. Better music is always in demand. The dance music is better now than when jazz first came out. Many of the popular pieces now are becoming semi-classics."

The Record Digest, published by the Brunswick people has this to say about jazz: "The world wants music to say something, not merely to talk in circles. Just jazz won't do; the new jazz is the developed points of rhythm, accent and unique tone combinations which feature the old jazz mixed with thought and understanding. The secret is control and poise in the application of the salient characteristics of the former type accomplished today by directors and musicians of the progressive dance orchestras."

SEVEN TEACHERS AT SECTIONAL MEETING

Seven teachers attended a county sectional conference held in district 2 in Cicero Friday under the direction of Supervising Teachers Genevieve Collar and Nellie McDermott. Teachers who attended were Agnes Jones, district 6; Luella Krickberg, joint district 2; Gladys Lockery, district 7; Miriam Meredith, joint district 1; Myrtle Reetz, district 4 and Arnold Schultz, district 3.

Thanksgiving Dance at Greenville Park Pavilion, Wednesday, Nov. 23rd. Music by Pfeiffer's Orchestra of Oshkosh. Busses leave Pettibone's at 8 P. M.

During the forenoon, supervising and visiting teachers observed the work of the local teacher, Miss Duholz. At noon the pupils were dismissed and the afternoon was spent in a discussion of school matters.

"Jazz music as displayed in the early jazz records is no music at all," said Harry Stoffel of the Kamps and Stoffel store. "The first jazz records were in can and fresh effects. Paul Whitman of the Victor company has revolutionized jazz music since he has turned his attention and that of his trained symphony orchestra to dance music. He has worked out a different style of orchestra and like the symphony allows each place in the orchestra to be featured in its place."

Mr. Stoffel played some of the early records and some of Whitman's which are just out to show the evolution of jazz from mere noise to pleasing effects in harmony. It is Mr. Stoffel's opinion that with the change in music written for the fox trot that the dance itself will become more stately and will in effect resemble the minuet. He feels that the dance and the music for it has come to stay. He also explained the origin of the music called "the blues." When an orchestra strikes a false note it is called a blue note and when they began playing entire selections of key, "the blues" was the natural name for them.

No Wonder You Can't Buy Much With This Money

Several samples of 1921 and 1917 German money have been received by an Appleton man and were shown to local postal employees Saturday.

Samples of lithographed script measuring about two by three inches and marked in denominations of 25 and 50 pfennings were among the samples. These were issued by banks and business houses in the city of Leipzig to relieve an almost entire lack of national money.

The government coins made of hard maroon rubber are probably the most unusual specimens of money seen in Appleton. A circle of stars around the border and the value of the coin are the only marks stamped upon them. The 1917 coins are nickel and are the same size as our five-cent piece.

HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE WIN GRID BATTLES

Vincent's Crew Evens Up Score With Green Bay Team On Saturday

Appleton Whips East Green Bay, 17 to 6, on Muddy Field—Protest Green Bay Touchdown—Roach is Big Star.

Appleton high school got sweet revenge for what happened in Lagermeister field last year when it defeated East Green Bay high school, 37 to 6, in a sea of mud in Lawrence field Saturday afternoon, thereby ending the 1921 home season in a blaze of glory. The high school has only one defeat to mar its record this year.

Appleton outplayed Green Bay almost every minute of the game. Near the close of the third period and at the start of the fourth the Baymen rallied and made the going hard for the Orange and Blue but the rest of the time they were almost helpless.

Appleton lost two fine chances to score touchdowns in the first two periods because it persisted in playing straight football instead of opening up with passes. The throwing game resulted in two markers in rapid succession in the third period.

Green Bay's touchdown in the final period brought a storm of protests in which it was alleged that 12 Green Bay men were on the playing field when the play was started and that several backfield men were in motion when the ball was snapped. The play was started immediately after a substitution was made on the Green Bay team and the ball was snapped without the usual preliminary of calling signals. Orange and Blue men were watching the play taken out of the game leave the field and the play was started before they were set. The ball was passed far over the line of scrimmage into a waiting Bayman's arms and he had easy sailing to the goal line. The goal kick following was missed.

Roach scored Appleton's first marker when he stopped back on Green Bay's 21 yard line in the second quarter and dropped a perfect kick between the goal posts for a touchdown. Appleton advanced the ball to Green Bay's 2-foot line only to lose it on downs. The boys were depending entirely on straight football for their gains.

Appleton Opens Up
The third period showed more startling football. With the Bay backfield playing in close on the defense, Tappert heaved the ball over their heads to Briess who ran the 15 yard line. On the next play Roach carried the ball around for a touchdown. Green Bay kicked off to Appleton and in about three plays Tappert threw a long pass to Briess who jaunted across the line for a touchdown.

Roach, playing his last high school game at home, was the big star of the game. He was a "pillar of strength" on the defense, ran his team well and made substantial gains around the ends. Tappert played about the best game of his 1921 career, tearing big holes through the opposing line. Vincent's line, weakened by a hospital list, did not present quite as substantial a resistance as fans here are accustomed to.

Zussman ran back punts in a most pleasing manner often returning the ball to the spot from where it was kicked by Green Bay. He gave some splendid exhibitions of open field running.

FRANCE RAZZING ITS FORMER IDOLS

By United Press Leased Wire
Paris—Two of the greatest French idols were topping on their pedestals today under a barrage of verbal bombs.

Georges Carpentier, king of the European ring, and Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, queen of the courts, were forced to issue public statements in answer to a wave of hostile criticism in the French papers.

After the downfall of Carpentier against Dempsey, the defeat of Mlle. Suzanne by the American tennis champion, Mrs. Mollie Mallory, was the last blow to France.

All kinds of rumors about the conduct of the French girl in America went the rounds.

Mlle. Lenglen today issued a statement denying all the criticism and particularly stating that she did not appear in a New York cabaret dancing the same night she defaulted and left the court in her match with Mrs. Mallory.

The criticism of Carpentier has been doubly severe since reports were made public that he could never fight again.

Francis Descamps issues a statement today denying that Georges would not fight in Europe because of the low value of the franc and the pound.

Mack Knows How To Please Fans

By Billy Evans
Copyright, 1921, by Post Pub. Co.
Managing a big league ball club is a precarious job.

You must constantly deliver the goods or fandom starts yelling for your head.

Club owners pay considerable attention to the attitude of the fans, for they pay the freight.

That is why the life of the average major league manager is of short duration. The moment he fails to get results, the club owner starts to look around for his successor.

Connie Mack stands out as the only exception to this rule in the history of major league baseball.

Managers come and managers go, but Connie Mack never even thinks of departing. For seven years Mack's clubs have held undisputed possession of last place. Such a record would be enough to cause the ordinary manager to be banished to one of the leagues under the sea.

Connie Mack, however, continues to lead his cellar champs. There is an insistent demand on the part of the Philadelphia fans for his removal. Seven years of reverses have not dimmed the lustre of his managerial record in the least. He is still regarded as one of the wise men of the game. Connie Mack is truly the "mystery man of baseball."

Mack retains the prestige he won as a maker of championship teams. Stranger yet his tall end teams are popular. It sounds like a wild state ment, but the tallenders of 1921 made far more money for Mack than his pennant winners of 1914. That is one reason why Connie continues to smile and can partake of plenty of food without any fear of indigestion. Sympathy for Mr. Mack is therefore wasted. Connie is perfectly at ease with the world. However, I do know that he yearns to win another pennant.

Connie good-naturedly explains his ability to retain his job, despite his lead pipe cinch on last place, by saying:

"I just can't be fired. I hold the controlling interest in the ball club."

Getting Serious

Getting serious, Mack retains his prestige and popularity because he knows the pulse of the public. When Philadelphia tired of his champions, he sold the stars of his club. Philly has since been interested in his efforts to rebuild another great team. Several times he has seemed to be on the way to his goal. To my way of thinking, Mack knows more baseball than any other man connected with the game. Mack is the only developer of players in the major leagues. Other managers buy stars; Mack makes them. When the fans tire of his teams, whether they are pennant winners or cellar champs, he gives them new faces. No matter how poorly his club has been playing of late years, Mack always seemed to have some phenomenon or alleged—in reserve.

"If the fans don't like your lineup, change it." That has been Mack's slogan in success and failure, and it seems to work both ways. Of one thing Mack is certain, it gets the money at the gate.

SATURDAY'S GRID GAMES CLEARED UP MANY TITLE CLAIMS

Notre Dame May Go West to Play California Squad on New Years Day

By Henry L. Farrell
By United Press Leased Wire
New York—"Who's who in football" is now fairly well established.

Penn State in the east, Iowa in the west, Cornell on the coast and Centre in the south.

There may be some dispute about this.

Cornell, Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson are undefeated in the east but they haven't played the schedule that Penn State so far has gotten away with.

Some contend, who have seen western football, that Notre Dame today is as strong as the undefeated Iowa team, but the fact remains that Notre Dame lost to Iowa.

The situation on the coast is clear. California is out and out the champion and perhaps the greatest team developed on the Pacific seaboard—perhaps the greatest team in the country.

Georgia Tech may argue over any effort to crown Centre but—Centre beat Harvard, Harvard beat Penn State and Penn State walloped Georgia Tech.

Season Nearly Over
With the exception of a few scattered games on Thanksgiving day, the Army-Navy game Saturday and a few intercollegiate games, the 1921 season is over.

If Penn State defeats Pittsburg on Thursday, the great state team will go to Pasadena until Harvard downed the Blue Saturday. Now it is understood that Notre Dame, which is regarded in the east as one of the greatest elevens of years will be invited to take the jaunt across the continent for the New Year classic of the coast. Notre Dame is not among traveling and Notre Dame is proud of that team. If the invitation comes, Notre Dame is almost sure to go.

One of the clearest facts in the football season is that the "big three" is far removed from any championship consideration. The

MANAGER HAS CREW OF TITLE CHASERS

Dunn Manages Flock of Young Fellows Well Up in Pugilistic Circles

Most boxing managers are content to have one contender for a championship title in their stable.

Not so with Jimmy Dunn, the Cleveland mentor. At the present time Dunn has four boys who are class performers.

There are many who believe that Carl Tremaine is a better boy than Johnny Buff, the holder of the bantam title. Al Corbett, who is not known out of Ohio boxing circles, is almost as likely a contender as Tremaine. Both boys can easily make 115 pounds.

Johnny Kar is generally considered the logical opponent of Jack Britton for the welterweight honors. Bryan Downey is a fifty-fifty middleweight champion, sharing the honor with Johnny Wilson.

Another boy in the Dunn stable who has shown great promise is Charley O'Connell, who has victories in his credit over Denny Valger, Blodde Richards and a number of other lesser lights.

O'Connell is a legitimate lightweight. He scarcely ever tips the beam at more than 120. Dunn has visions of his boys winning the middleweight and tautum championships during the next two years.

Kilbane, who holds the featherweight title, is a product of Dunn's methods.

championship title of the "big three" is even undecided. Princeton beat Harvard, Harvard beat Yale and Yale beat Princeton.

IOWA SCORED LARGEST NUMBER OF POINTS

By United Press Leased Wire
Chicago—Iowa, undisputed champion of the western conference and midwestern, also leads the circuit in scoring, registering 122 points to opponents 15.

This total represents 19 touchdowns, and 15 goals from touchdowns. Not a single field goal was counted by the Hawkeyes.

Wisconsin is second with 89 markers, while Ohio State, which unexpectedly met defeat Saturday at the hands of the fighting Illinois eleven, which previously had not won a conference game, is third with 74 points.

The figures include only "big ten" games.

ORANGE AND BLUE GRID TEAM STARTS ON WESTERN TRIP

Beatrice, Neb., Team is Eliminated From Title Race by Lincoln

Appleton high school football team, 14 strong, left Sunday night for Beatrice, Neb., where it will play the powerful high school team of that city on Thanksgiving day. Every one of the Appleton men is in fine condition for the battle. They have been especially pointed for it and expect to show the westerners how football is played in Wisconsin.

The team reached Minneapolis Sunday night and will leave for Omaha today. It expects to get into Beatrice Tuesday night and will work out on the Nebraska gridiron on Wednesday. Beatrice has one of the finest high school stadiums in the country.

Beatrice was eliminated from Nebraska championship chances on Friday when it was defeated by Lincoln, 23 to 20, in a wild game before 4,000 fans. Both teams played every kind of football in the book but Lincoln's superior weight was too much for the Beatrice squad. At that Lincoln did not score its winning tally until the last few minutes of play.

Lincoln high school is more than twice as large as the Beatrice institution and has a much larger number of students to pick a team from but Beatrice is well coached and plays a great game.

Appleton will outweigh the Beatrice squad and it is believed its line will tear big holes through the Nebraskaans. Its forward pass game also is expected to be pretty much of a puzzle for the westerners.

ago Saturday, Lawrence had a hard time defeating Carroll college at Waukesha, 6 to 0, last Saturday afternoon. Boettcher's recovery of a fumble and his run of 35 yards following gave the Blue and White its only marker. The score was made in the first five minutes of play. Thereafter the teams battled furiously, with the lighter Carroll squad holding its own pretty much of the time. The Lawrence goal was never seriously threatened while Carroll was in danger a few times.

The victory gives Lawrence undisputed championship of Wisconsin, with Beloit in second place. Ripon in third, Carroll in fourth and Northwestern bringing up the rear.

Lawrence and Carroll depended almost entirely on straight football all during the game. Lawrence showed the effect of letting down after the Ripon game and did not play its usual slashing style of game. Carroll was outwitted but managed to make a good showing against the heavier Blue and White squad. The Presbyterian have a splendid line which held very well.

Beloit Whips Ripon
Saturday was homecoming day at Waukesha and a large number of former students returned to see the game.

One of the biggest upsets in the Little Five in years was the 16 to 3 victory of Beloit over Ripon on the Beloit field. Ripon also was stale and did not play its usual game. Coach Tommy Mills had worked out a defense against the Gustin-Schneider combination and at the same time developed a fine ground gaining machine. Beloit played its best game of the season and easily earned its victory.

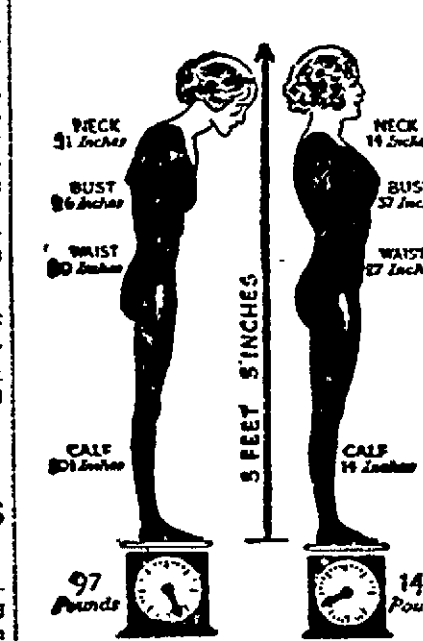

With nearly every man on the Lawrence team in a stale condition as a result of the terrific training in preparation for the Ripon game a week

Can you imagine a Harvard coach assisting in the defeat of the Crimson team?

An echo from the Centre College game makes it seem that Ned Mahan, former Harvard star and now coach of the back field, played such a role.

One of the features of Centre college's play in the Harvard game was the work of Shadoan. It seems that Mahan discovered Shadoan while the latter was playing tackle for an A. E. team in France.

In conversation with Coach Moran one day, he casually told what a great player Shadoan seemed to be, despite the fact that he had never been coached in line play. Evidently he then forgot about the matter.

Not Charley Moran. He at once looked up the home address of Shadoan. Strangely enough, he discovered that Shadoan came from the same town as "Red" Roberts, one of his regulars. The rest was easy. Shadoan reported with the freshman class at Danville and immediately won a regular berth for himself. His work in the line against Harvard could hardly have been improved on.

The moral of this story is: If Shadoan was so good that Mahan had to tell the world about it, why not slip him to Harvard?—B. E.

"PLASTER" DOCTOR GRANTED PARDON

Most Noted Medical Fakir in State Is Released Due to Ill Health

Madison—"Doctor" John Till, the noted "plaster" specialist of Barron county, who has been confined in jail under a one-year sentence since Jan. 13, 1921, was granted an absolute pardon Saturday by Gov. John J. Blaine.

Till has been arrested numerous times for violation of the medical practices act, has been fined and was finally sentenced to the county jail for one year the maximum sentence under the law. He appealed his case to the supreme court but the lower court was sustained and he was forced to go to jail.

In granting the pardon Gov. Blaine declared that county jails are not constructed for the care of prisoners for any length of time and that the pardon is granted upon report of three reputable physicians that Till's health has been affected by his confinement and that unless he is released his health will be impaired.

Till has gained more notoriety in Wisconsin than any other professed healer. He claimed to heal or cure his patients with the use of a plaster whose composition was a secret with him and he claimed to be persecuted by the medical profession because of jealousy. He was so clever in his methods that it was necessary to amend the medical practices act before he could finally be convicted and sent to jail.

It was reported recently that Till had agreed to leave not only Wisconsin but the United States if granted a pardon, but if so no mention was made of the agreement in granting the pardon.

LOW CURVE BALL IS BABE'S WORST ENEMY

Southpaws make more trouble for Babe Ruth than right-handers, despite the fact that Babe has made a great many home runs off the port-side. A low curve ball on the outside is Babe's worst enemy. Neft of the Giants used such a type ball in the world series and in one game struck Ruth out three times.

Because of his peculiar stance at the plate, it is very difficult for Ruth to hit a low curve ball outside. It is the curve ball inside, whether low or high, that Ruth murders.

A pitcher who has a charge of lace and can slow up on Ruth, also is troublesome to the big fellow whether he is a left or right-hander. Shocker of St. Louis and Kerr of Chicago are such a type. While Ruth gets his home runs off the deliveries of these two pitchers, they more often make him look foolish.

A Smile In The News

Dear Heck:
Having been out of work:
My clothes are looking shabby
For I can't afford a press.
My bank roll's getting smaller,
To myself I must confess:
I can't afford to buy the meals,
My stomach craves to eat;
My shoes are on their death bed
And I'll soon be on my feet.

My ties are getting scanty,
And my collar's black with dirt;
My luck is awful chilly.
For I haven't got a shirt;
My clothes are at the laundry
And I'll never get them back,
Till I get a job some place
And save a little jack.

My landlord gets excited
When my room rent's falling due,
He hands me such an awful look,
And sticks around like glue;
He saw me eating snow balls
And I guess he knows by that
That I am in an awful fix -
My pocket book is flat.

rent is falling due. That must be the rainy day we hear so much talk about.

THE GIFT CAROL

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

T

Oh here's a doll
For little Poll
And so of course
There is a horse,
A nobby hob
For brother Bob.
A rummy tum!
There goes the drum
And horn so shrill
For soldier Bill.
A kangaroo
A circus zoo
A jumping clown
For Jimmy Brown.

Around we swiftly dance
About the tree so tall.
Around we gayly prance
There are Christmas gifts for all.

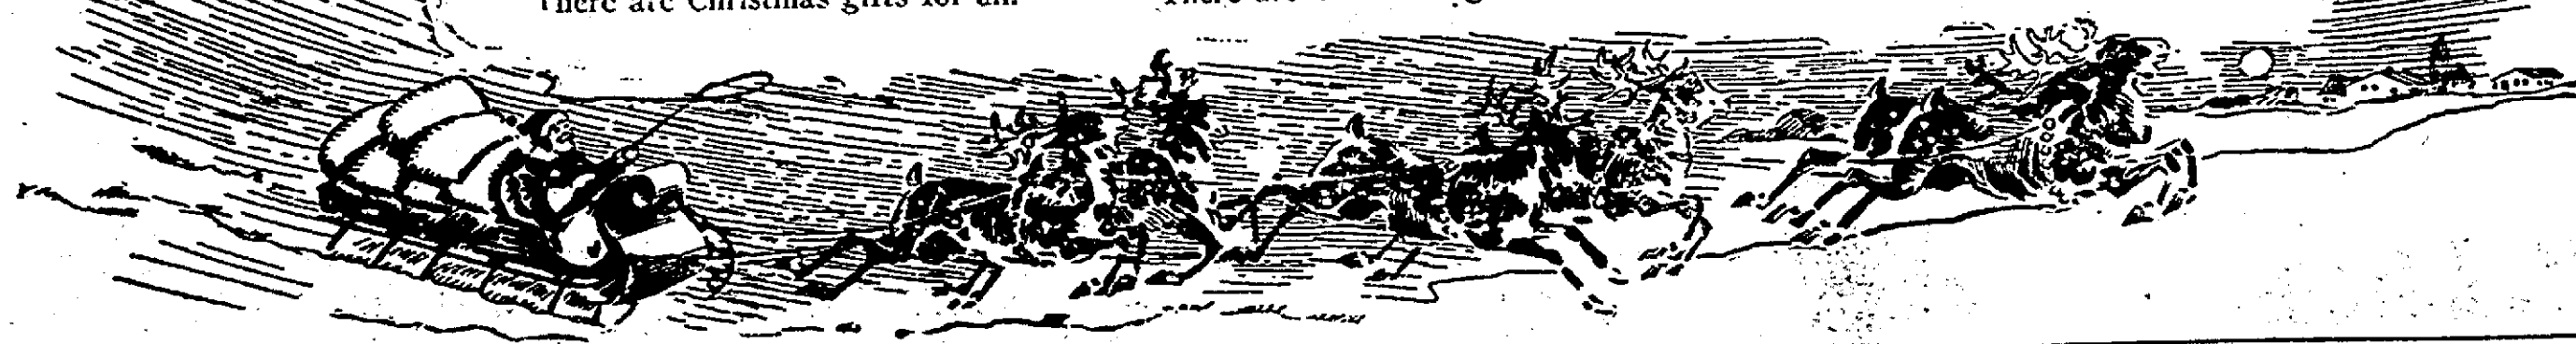

For Nancy Ann
A feather fan,
A purse, a ring
And pearly string.
And dear old Dad,
Why aren't you glad?
Just look and see
What's on the tree.
Suspenders, blue,
A neck tie, too,
A hat of felt
A brand new belt.
Oh let us sing
And form a ring—

Around we swiftly dance
About the tree so tall.
Around we gayly prance
There are Christmas gifts for all.

Around we gayly prance
There are Christmas gifts for all.

But now look here
For Mother, dear,
A parasol,
A pretty shawl,
And don't forget.
Come children four
And look for more.
This candy cane
So straight and vain,
Its color loud
Is much too proud.
Too good, too pure,
To last, I'm sure.

Around we swiftly dance
About the tree so tall.
Around we gayly prance
There are Christmas gifts for all.

Games for Children at Christmas

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

At Christmas it seems especially appropriate to resurrect all the old games, that have amused children for ages past. Some of them are best played out-of-doors, while others may be played either within or without.

One of these, a general favorite, is mentioned in one of the Christmas celebrations in Dickens' "Pickwick Papers," and still earlier in Washington Irving's "Sketch Book." This is "Blind Man's Buff." Every one is so familiar with this good old game which will never lose its ability to amuse, so that the rules for playing it need not be given here.

"Hide and Seek" is another of these old "standbys." One variation of this game might be mentioned here. We children called it "Cheese It." One child was "It." At goal he covered his eyes while he counted ten calling out "Cheese It!" at the end of ten. He then opened his eyes and anyone he saw moving had to return to goal. When all had disappeared from sight he hunted until he found one of them, whom he must precede to goal. This child then became "It" and the game continued as before.

This game of course, is equally interesting whether played indoors or out. "Fox and Geese," another old favorite, is best played out in the snow. A large circle is tramped in the snow, with two diagonals crossing it at right angles. The center thus formed is "Safety." The Fox is chosen and is "It" as in other games. He must catch one of the "geese." The other children, the "geese," run around and across the circle, no one leaving the beaten paths, of course. Any one standing at "Safety" cannot be tagged, but he must leave at once on the approach of another "goose." Once a goose is tagged, he becomes "fox" and must chase the others in turn.

Several of the old games involve running, which makes them just right for out-of-doors in cold weather. Where there is a large group of children, that ancient pastime "Run, Sheep, Run" will be found lively and full of interest.

The children are evenly divided, each group selecting a captain. Then there is held a secret consultation of each side with its respective captain, in which signals are arranged. Then one group with its captain leaves for hiding. They travel for some distance, marking their course with arrows in chalk on side walks, fences, or buildings. When they are safely hidden, their captain returns to the other group. The second group starts out to find them, guided by the arrows. As they continue, the captain of the hidden children, calls signals which indicate how near the pursuers are approaching. When he thinks the pursuers are far enough from goal, he calls, "Run, Sheep, Run!" The hidden group then run into goal, while the others try to arrive first. If they do arrive first, it then becomes their turn to hide.

There is something so fascinating about this game that children will play it for days running.

Young people of high school age are all familiar with "Last Couple Out." This is often played in summer but can be just as interesting in winter. Where a barn dance was being held this game could be easily managed indoors, just so there was plenty of space in which to play.

For those who may never have indulged in this sport the simple rules are here given. Boys and girls line up as for a march, in pairs. The front couple calls, "Last Couple Out!" The end couple of the line separate and run for position at the front of the line. The couple there try to tag them before they reach it. Failing this, they drop out of the game. If they do tag the last couple before they reach the front position those two then drop out of the game. Thus the game continues until one couple is left triumphant!

For indoors, one form of charades is called "New York." Here two groups are necessary, each with a captain. One group leaves the room, and selecting a name, or a word of several syllables, arranges to act out the syllables in sections. For instance take the name "New-found-land." The first syllable can be handled in dialogue in which the word "new" is mentioned prominently. The second can be done in pantomime, a person "finding" something. The last, "land" can be discovered in pantomime.

Having decided on all the details, the group returns to the room where the others are waiting. The captains then carry through this dialogue.

First, "Here we come!"

Second, "Where, from?"

First, "New York."

Second, "What's your trade?"

First, "Lemonade."

Second, "Give us some."

This is the signal to start the dialogue, or pantomime. The opposite group try to guess the word which if they do they immediately try to catch or capture the first group. It is now the second group's turn for pantomime.

If one starts to think of these old games for use with children at Christmas several more will occur to him. For instance "Farmer in the Dell," and "Duck on the Rock" and many, many more. Games in which all can enter seem the best, for that brings up the spirit of Christmas, a jolly good fellowship, a happy companionship of old and young together.

CAMERON-SCHULZ

Christmas Dishes from Other Lands.

"Christmas would not be Christmas in Hungary," said my Hungarian friend, "without fruit cake."

"Tell me how it is made," said I.

The description she gave me, well, I think you will agree with me, that a fairly makes your mouth water to think of it. And no wonder, for the famous loaf must contain citron and orange peel, walnuts and almonds, cherries, dates, spices and hazelnuts. No frosting crowns this masterpiece, as it would in our country, but even so, doesn't it make you hungry?

Gingerbread boys are always baked for the children at holiday time in Hungary. Currants make features, and buttons, but here again no frosting is used. Small sugar cakes belong to the little-folks too.

Before Christmas, cakes are placed on the table, and are eaten and replaced, until after Christmas. Such generous hospitality!

One of the large cakes is the famous "Torte." It reaches twelve layers high, just think of it. The bays are very thin, though, and their filling is made of chocolate and butter. The top layer is covered with burnt sugar. Oh, yum. Walnut cake another of these larger delicacies made in a long flat loaf. Its principal distinction is its walnuts cooked in milk and honey.

Among the gems of the baking art that are a delight to the palate, are some of the Austrian confections.

These come in all shapes, variously decorated, sometimes with nuts, almonds and walnuts, but of citron for leaves beside bright cherries, and little star shapes covered with sugar.

"Strudel" is a flaky confection, the thin numberless layers of which resemble the cut leaves of cabbage. Cheese is sometimes used as a filling with nuts and then again there is the apple "strudel."

Austrian artists in cookery make another dainty cake called "lovers' delight." A very rich filling of fruit is worked into pastry. Narrow strips of plain pastry are laid over the top of this, in a round me pan. After it is baked, powdered sugar is shaken over it. At last it is served, cut in very thin squares on account of its richness.

A fruit cake baked like a loaf of bread is one of the Christmas joys in Sweden. It is called "Yule Kake." Similar to it is the German "Stollen." This is a large cake, heavily frosted, and rolled over like a parkerhouse roll. It contains spices, citron, raisins and nuts.

Of course, in Germany, Christmas just must have its "Pfeffermuss," a tiny gingerbread cake coated with powdered sugar. "Matzapan" is a very rich cake. "Lebkuchen," honey cookies are natural companions to the ginger cakes. Little almond cakes, made of almond paste come in all sorts of shapes. Stars there are, carrots, balls, baskets, and many other fanciful designs.

A special meat dish for Christmas is a loaf made of pork, which is allowed to jelly. It is called "Sulze" and is served cold in slices, with parsley.

In England there appears the good mince pie and its great friend, the plum pudding. In Dicken's day, alas, no longer can it be served in this manner in the United States—the plum pudding arrived on the table in state, all alight with burning brandy, with a twig of holly in the midst. Young roast pig especially belongs to the holiday celebrations to commemorate the ancient boar's head of historic fame.

In France more attention is paid to New Year's Day. This is the time for the pleasant exchange of visits, calls, and happy greetings. "Open House" one finds everywhere, with the serving of tea.

Delicious little cakes, "Gateaux" accompany the tea. Tarts are among those present, with all sorts of fillings such as almond paste, and fruit—raspberries, strawberries, and cherries. "Brioche" is another one of these cakes, its pastry resembling other cream puffs without the cream.

Perhaps, with the rapidly changing times in Europe, some of these ancient companions to the Christmas celebration will be pushed off the map. Let us hope not. Let us rather hope that the cook books will be preserved intact, and their valuable arts kept for coming generations.

Santa Claus' Messengers

By Marjorie Howe Dixon

"Is there really a Santa Claus, daddy?" asked Alfred, his anxious eyes aglow as he stood by his father's knee.

It was the night before Christmas and the family was gathered together in the living room before the fireplace whose flashing and dancing flames glistened on the silver and gold teatons decorating the Christmas tree. An irregular row of stockings hung from the mantle and were silhouetted against the fire. The family had had a happy time listening to the Christmas Carols from the phonograph and to their father who was gifted with a remarkable fund of stories.

It was now time for Alfred to go to bed, his mother had already left the room. He, however, was in no hurry.

"Is there a Santa Claus?" he asked.

"Yes, my lad, there is," responded his father. "Some folks will try to tell you that Old St. Nick is just a story and not real at all. I feel sorry for those kind of people. Do you know how old Santa Claus is?"

Alfred shook his yellow head.

"Santa Claus," continued his father, "is as old as old can be. Santa Claus was here long before there ever were little boys and girls."

"Now listen real carefully and I'll tell you a secret about Santa Claus which most folks don't know. Santa Claus is love. Yes, sir, Santa Claus is love. It is love who will fill those stockings tonight.

"Course you can't see love nor can you see Santa Claus but he is real just the same."

A light of understanding brightened the lad's face. His father knew that mother would be calling for him, but who could resist continuing before such an enrapt listener?

"Now then, let me tell you something more about Santa which most people have forgotten all about. Santa Claus is with us the whole year round and not just for Christmas only. Sure, it is love who takes the basket of jollies and pies and chicken to the poor boys and girls who have no father or mother to take care of them.

"So then whenever any folks tell you that Santa isn't real you just tell them you know better."

"Now before mother calls us again maybe I can tell you something else about Santa. He always has his messengers. Everybody who loves is Santa's messenger. Wouldn't you like to be one? I've tried to be one for a long time and it is just lots of fun."

Alfred expressed his delight with a perfectly kissable smile as he nodded his head.

"Well sir! Tomorrow is Christmas and it is the time for little boys and girls and everybody too, to have a happy joyous day. Tomorrow you will wake up early, I know. You will waken too early for me but since it is only once a year I'll forgive you. Anyhow, after you have found all the wonderful things stuffed in your long stockings and played with all the things under the Christmas tree, we are all going to be messengers for Santa Claus."

"You and mother and I are going to fix up a big basket with good things to eat. We will bundle up real warm and take the basket around to the block beyond the old church. Widow Miranda lives in a little cottage with her little girl and we are going to surprise them with this basket. They will be so happy because they will know that Santa Claus has not forgotten them. Won't that be fun?"

"Oh yes, daddy," exclaimed Alfred, clapping his hands. "Let's be Santa's messengers. Oh I can hardly wait until morning!"

"All right," said his father, "the quicker to bed the sooner will Christmas be here. Come on."

Alfred grasped his father's hand and they marched off in response to the mother's insistent call.

A Christmas Pageant In The School Room

Just to be a little bit different this plan is going to leave out, purposely, the well known St. Nicholas. Yet it is believed that it will be sufficiently Christmasy to satisfy the little folks for whose special benefit it has been planned.

To carry out the idea quite a little preparation will be necessary. This can be done cheaply. The work the children should do for themselves, such as trimming the tree, and making their own costumes.

To start at the end instead of the beginning, the final performance of the pageant will be the distribution of gifts from the tree. One way for the teacher to handle the giving is to say that no gift should cost over twenty-five cents (or whatever amount the children can afford) and further, that each child must hand in the names of the ones to whom he or she is giving. In this way the teacher can make sure that no child is left out. It will be well to see that each child receives at least two gifts, since one of the givers might fail to bring in his presents.

A collection can be taken up to buy tissue paper and a ball of red yarn.

Each child should be given a sheet of this paper and two yards of the yarn to tie up his packages. Then when the gifts are brought in they will present a uniform appearance. Red yarn is fully as attractive as ribbon for tying packages and much cheaper.

The pageant will start with the entrance of two boys dressed as candles. They will march stiffly to the center front of the stage and then separate. March music will accompany them. If a piano is not available, they can make a simple statement, "We are the Christmas Candles to light up Christmas Eve."

Then will come a fluttering group of little girls dancing, representing snowflakes. Holly boys and mistletoe girls will follow them, marching first then dancing, and finally forming a V shape, awaiting the next entrance. This will be the Tree, a small one on a table on casters, pushed in by a group of evergreen fairies. Gifts will be piled about its base, and it will be bare of ornament.

All of the fairies will pass around the tree and each put a little ornament on it. Then they will group themselves about it, the evergreen fairies seated in front with one or two snowflakes, the taller holly and mistletoe fairies back of it and either side. The rest of the snowflakes will stand in front of these latter.

Singing of Christmas songs will come next.

After this a passageway should be made for the teacher to come to the front to distribute gifts from the tree.

If she wishes she can make a few appropriate remarks about the gifts, which have been made by the children, each an expression of their kind feelings for each other, and so on.

As she reads the name on a package, one of the nearest fairies will deliver it to the owner, not returning to the stage. This will continue until all the fairies but two have left. These two will deliver the remaining gifts. This closes the program.

It may be that the teacher will prefer to distribute popcorn balls, instead of gifts.

Now to go back to the start.

The stage, the school platform, can be as simple or as elaborate as the teacher wishes. The blackboards can be covered with sheets to give a uniform setting, and the teacher's desk pushed to one side. One curtain at least will be necessary, for the tree must not appear until quite late on the program. This one curtain can be a sheet or perhaps a dark couch cover pinned to a wire strung across the room.

Two curtains, one either side, of dark material, would be best, of course giving two stage entrances for the different groups. It will not be necessary to close them.

The candles, the two boys, should have straight red crepe paper costumes, with their arms inside, and their caps representing flames.

And that reminds us. The tree may have candles on it but do not light them. With all the children dressed in paper over their other clothes, the risk is far too great to take for the little additional sparkle they might add to the tree. If some one donates electric bulbs, that is a different matter of course. Even then the connections must be carefully handled.

For snow flakes the group should be little girls dressed in white. To their dresses, crepe paper flakes can be sewn, with wings of snow flakes, and caps too, held erect by wires or pasteboard.

The holly boys should have dark suits, or white blouses and dark pants, with bright red sashes. Over this can be hung large holly leaves of crepe. The mistletoe girls can be dressed similarly with white dresses to which the leaves are fastened. Large cotton balls for berries should decorate their caps and wrists.

If evergreens are available, make the costumes for those faries of their branches. This group can be mixed, boys and girls, or one or the other just as the teacher wishes. If no hemlock or pine can be had, crepe paper can take its place slashed with fringes to represent needles.

The base of the tree and the table should be covered with red crepe paper, because many of the costumes will be green and the red is needed for contrast.

Now as to music. The teacher's entire time will be needed to send the groups on the stage in order. So a mother or some one interested must play the piano. Marches, dance music, and the songs will be needed.

However, music is not absolutely necessary. The snowflakes can stop their fluttering to say, "We are the snowflakes. We have come to cover all the earth with a coat of white." The holly and mistletoe groups can say, "We are the brothers of jolly Christmas. We have come to help him celebrate." The evergreens will say, "We always bring the beautiful Christmas tree and here it is now."

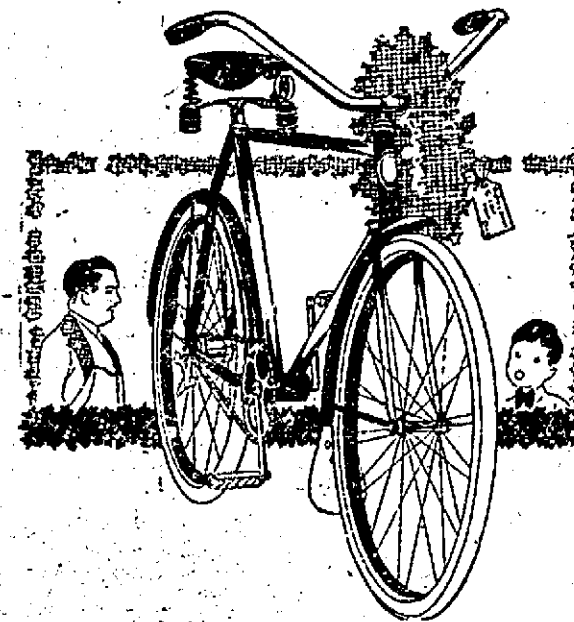

When the time comes to sing, the teacher can start the songs with a pitch pipe. In this way the lack of music need not spoil the pageant.

So Santa will not be missed, and it is hoped that all will agree that they had a Merry Christmas.

Painted things are especially interesting as gifts to make and have a charm all their own. They can be made to express so much of the giver's individuality. Then again they can be made to fit in with a definite scheme for a room, repeating its color effects with pleasing touches in similar tones.

A set of six colors in half pint cans in enamals costs about two dollars. Water color brushes will cost another dollar. With this outfit, a variety of things can be painted, for that amount of paint will last a long time.

Care of brushes must be considered. Each time they are used they must be washed in soap and water. Turpentine is good for cleaning them, but is not enough, since in time it will stiffen the bristles. Never allow paint to dry in your brushes.

The thought of creating designs may rather frighten the beginner. It need not, if he will only remember not to attempt too much at the start. Avoid a naturalistic flower. A flower form made of round dots from the end of the brush will be found to be very pretty and very effective and quite easy to do. A few experiments on paper will give you proficiency. There is a dainty jewel-like quality to the dots that admits of endless variations.

Glass candlesticks that may be purchased in the twenty-five and fifty-cent store, can be delightfully decorated in this manner. Coat hangers of wood painted all over pink or blue can be treated the same way. A pair of aluminum saltcellars will take on beauty by means of decoration. Other things will come to mind, such as boxes and wooden bowls, wooden knives and forks for salad sets, once one starts to look for them.

Another use for painting is found in decorating a set of old cloth table mats. For this purpose use the dull finish oil cloth, called santas. Blue and white has been used many times and oft, but it has a clean fresh look that is very attractive. If your friend has a pattern hanging in her dining room, with help of some one in family get a sample of it. Then trace the pattern and carefully match the colors, to use for decoration of the table mats. When your friend discovers that the set matches her hangings she will be doubly pleased with your thoughtful gift.

Among the needlework gifts women love to make for each other are numbers of dainty trifles. For those of more practical turn of mind gifts of lasting qualities can be fashioned.

These latter are especially exemplified in the quaint "kitchenette" aprons with caps to match. Sets can be found all stamped on unbleached muslin, ready to work, at some of the stores. But where these are not available, a clever woman can make her own designs with materials at hand. One of the aprons had pockets of "brown-eyed susans." The petals were of yellow percale appliqued about round centers. On the cap another "susan" appeared. Still another had blue tea cups for pockets. Another apron had flower pots of blue and white checked gingham. Above the pots, on the apron itself grew stiff little round flowers appliqued with embroidered stems. On each cap for each apron was a matching design.

Among the dainty trifles to be given each its measure of handwork, are colored handkerchiefs. How very, very sweet they look, two of them, each a different color folded in a little box. "One for blow, one for show" seems to be the motto for a plain one associates itself with a very frilly, filmy one side by side.

Most of the planer ones, sometimes colored, sometimes white, have drawn threads of colors for decoration. Tiny embroidered flowers are often added in fascinating groups. Frilly "handkerchiefs" are new this season being edged with net. Colored ones are edged with white, and then again with contrasting colors. Wee spots of colored embroidery are added.

A pretty camisole of wide lace insertion and ribbon can be quickly made. Wide pale pink ribbon forms the lower half with a narrow casing for elastic. The upper half is insertion, with an edging of lace and a narrow banding for the ribbon draw strings. Shoulder straps can be ribbon or insertion.

For those who enjoy doing drawn work there are several varieties of collars and cuffs, on which to bestow one's dainty stitches, for the purpose of making very acceptable gifts. One set of collars and cuffs was hem-stitched with an inch hem of canary yellow linen. Another was very simple and smart with a single line of drawn work inside the hem, and a narrow edging of filet.

Embroidered dots make clever trimmings for these tailored sets and if outlined with black, where a colored material is used, are very effective.

An unusual handbag designed for use with a summer costume is one about eight inches deep, crocheted with colored raffia. The bag has a wired top covered with raffia and closes with a loop fastening over an oval knob. A wide handle or strap with which to carry it is also made of crocheted raffia. One of these in dull petunia, color had raffia pansies for decoration about its top. Others had clusters of matching flowers of various colors.

Combs and fans similarly decorated are to be worn with party frocks this winter and the making of them presents an interesting problem to the designer. Velvet petals may form the entire fan while the comb is adorned with balls to match. A round comb for miladi of the bobbed hair is completely covered with tiny rosebuds whilst a knot of them decorates her chiffon fan. White velvet flowers as a corsage on a black gown can be repeated in one's hair atop a high comb. In fact when one really gets started on the subject, there is no end to the variety of delightful combinations of colors and flowers to be thought out, and so constructed as to make gifts of unusual charm.

The gift one makes surely expresses love to the recipient. For without a real affection, one could not, possibly, desire to put in all those little stitches, or careful touches of painting that the made gift shows forth.
